

McLAUGHLIN COLLEGE

As part of our popular Lunch Talk series
McLaughlin College Proudly Presents:

“Oil Pipelines and Pipe Dreams: What is the Real Issue?”

Presented by:

Wesley Cragg

The Premier of Alberta and oil company and pipeline executives want you to believe that building a Canada East or a pipeline west to Vancouver is a political issue and an economic necessity. They are wrong. It is an ethical issue and the resistance to constructing new pipelines is not going to fade away until the ethical issues involved are addressed and resolved.

DR. WESLEY CRAGG is one of the world’s leading scholars in the area of business ethics. He is a Senior Scholar and Professor at York University in philosophy and the Schulich School of Business. A Rhodes Scholar, he was invited to York University in 1992 as the first George R. Gardiner Professor of Business Ethics. He founded the Canadian Chapter of Transparency International. He is also Project Director and Principal Investigator for the Canadian Business Ethics Research Network (CBERN), located in the Schulich School of Business. Dr. Cragg has published widely in Canadian and international journals and written and edited a number of books. A recent research theme is mining, economic development and Aboriginal communities particularly those located in the Canadian North.
