Call for Presentations
Volume 12, Canadian Journal of Practical Philosophy
"Sustaining Shared Futures?"

The Canadian Journal of Practical Philosophy (CJPP), is an on-line, open access publication founded and edited by Philip MacEwen (pmacewen@yorku.ca) and Sandra Tomsons (sandratomsons@gmail.com).

It is published by the University of Windsor through its Leddy Library on-line, open access publishing unit.

The website of the CJPP is https://ojs.uwindsor.ca

Papers are solicited for Volume 12, "Sustaining Shared Futures?"

Can futures be shared and sustained in a world where traditions, with different and often disparate visions of what it is to be human (including how to live with nature, what constitutes a "well-ordered" society, the future of national and global states, the role of social media and artificial intelligence (AI) in contemporary culture, the epistemic integrity of science, the viability of the social sciences, the relevance of the arts, philosophy and theology, etc.), vie with each other for our attention and allegiance?

Presentations may take the form either of written papers or oral/video submissions.

Written papers should be no more than 5000 words, double-spaced, written in 12-point font, Times New Roman, and submitted to the Editors as Word-document attachments.

Authors should include 1) an abstract (no more than 100 words), 2) a bio (no more than 50 words), and 3) a list of keywords at the beginning of their papers. At the end of their papers, they should include 4) a list of References.

Authors should use one of the standard systems of referencing (e.g., APA; CMS; MLA) appropriate to the discipline in which there are writing.

If papers are interdisciplinary (e.g., humanities, science, social science, the professions, etc.), authors should use, as much as possible, the standard system of referencing appropriate to the dominant disciplinary orientation of their papers.

For examples of formatting and referencing, please consult previous volumes of the CJPP, https://scholar.uwindsor.ca/csspe/

Papers may be submitted in either English or French

The deadline for submission of presentations is September 15, 2024.

Please send submissions to the editors, Philip MacEwen (pmacwen@yorku.ca) and Sandra Tomsons (sandratomsons@gmail.com).
